Select materials with confidence and build your homes to last. This course covers information on systems during the three stages of new construction: foundation, framing, and exterior finishing. You will learn about selection criteria, properties of materials, application techniques and the long-term performance of the respective systems.

As a graduate of this course, you will be able to:

- Describe the various design and material components of foundation, framing, and exterior finish systems
- Identify the factors that impact design and selection of foundation, framing, and exterior finish systems
- Identify criteria for evaluating the performance of foundation, framing, and exterior finish systems.

Continuing Education Hours: 6.0

Designations: CGA, CGB, and SC Master Builder
